In the present world, where data is one of the most valuable asset, organisations are looking into ways to tap into information previously locked.

As a consultant, I had an opportunity to have a closer look into the extent of information locked into formats that are not easily accessible by the employees, or more importantly, would require a tremendous amount of time and resources to use the information appropriately.